Event Summary

Accounting for Derivatives in Practice Under IFRS 9

will give participants a deep understanding of derivatives accounting and the application of hedge accounting for hedges of interest rate, inflation, FX and commodity risks. Real cases will be used extensively to demonstrate the learning objectives, applying IFRS 9 step-by-step. The new requirements are contrasted with IAS 39 where relevant.

Case studies incorporate real-life client discussions, and cover the decision-making, documentation requirements, hedge effectiveness assessment and the accounting entries of a hedging strategy during its life. The course will examine the following types of hedges and issues:

- Foreign exchange risk
- Commodity risk
- Interest rate risk including inflation risk
- Credit risk
- Convertible bonds
- Embedded derivatives

IFRS 9 – Financial Instrument Recognition and Impairment for Banks will provide you with an in-depth grasp of the practical challenges faced by banks when accounting for financial instruments.

Instruction is based on a heavy use of real examples, taken from the practical discussions that the seminar leader has had with European global banks. Derivatives, financial instruments at FVTOCI, repos and CoCos are covered in detail. In addition, the practical issues regarding hedge accounting, impairment, offsetting and netting are addressed. Case Studies used in this seminar will examine the following:

- Financial Assets Recognition
- Financial Liabilities Recognition
- Recognition of Other Financial Instruments
- Impairment – IFRS 9 Model Overview
- Impairment – Expected Credit Losses
- Impairment – Significant Increase in Credit Risk
- Impairment – Purchased or Originated Credit Impaired Debt Instruments
- Offsetting vs. netting under IFRS 9
